DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Uchise et al.

As per claim 1, Uchise et al. teach a system comprising a ventilation unit (fan 21), acquisition unit 24 acquiring data regarding a quantity of air ventilated by the ventilation unit, and recording unit 22 recording the ventilation data (see Solution section). While Uchise does not specifically teach the system being for a "container," official notice is taken that the basic ventilation acquisition and recording applied equally to any space being controlled, and thus would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to apply to a container since storage and transport containers are commonly ventilated and climate controlled, and further since understanding the amount of airflow into or out of the container has a clear impact on the state of materials/perishables within the container.

As per claim 2, Uchise et al. teach outputting the ventilation amount value (see last sentence of Solution section).

As per claim 3, Uchise et al. do not teach a second output unit. However, having multiple output units is a common feature of control systems. For example, the multiple output units could be a computer screen and a printer, or two separate monitors of a LAN system. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to add a second output unit for the purpose of allowing multiple users to observe the control data.
